Overview

The Bachelor of Arts in the Liberal Arts provides students with an integrated understanding of the influences which have shaped the development of human culture. For the first two years, full-time students will study core units in history, literature, philosophy and theology. In their third year, students are required to complete two science units, and may elect to complete a major by undertaking 8 units of study (overall) in a discipline of their choice.

Australian universities do not offer an integrated education in the liberal arts characterised by a core curriculum – embracing both the arts and sciences – which all students undertake. Yet such an education is of powerful and enduring value, as shown by the effectiveness of graduates in the marketplace. According to recent reports from Deloitte and Ernst & Young, employers are placing higher value on critical thinking, problem-solving and effective communication than vocational schooling when recruiting recent graduates. Developing such skills are at the heart of a liberal arts education, with employers reporting superior transferrable skills amongst liberal arts graduates relative to graduates in other fields. Our degree provides a solid foundation for future study and workplace readiness, with our graduates successfully pursuing careers in teaching, journalism, business, law, medicine, evangelisation, academia and politics.

Course Outline

Students are required to successfully complete 24 units to meet the minimum requirements for the degree, with at least 8 units at each of 100, 200 and 300 level.

Interested in a Diploma instead? Our Diploma of Liberal Arts – Foundations of the Western Tradition allows students to complete just the first year of Campion's Bachelor degree, undertaking Level 100 units in history, literature, philosophy and theology.
